This lesson begins by defining academic integrity and ethical behavior and by exploring the potential consequences of violating these principles. Students then begin to explore the idea of Internet use and discuss the concept of on-line risk. Finally, students will work together to identify potential risks associated with Internet use and examine the ways in which they can mitigate those risks. Learning Objectives: Upon completion of this lesson, the student will be able to: 1. Describe the concept of academic integrity and academic dishonesty and explain how these concepts are related. 2. Describe the Internet and discuss the concept of on-line risk. 3. Identify the possible consequences of violating ethical principles of Internet use. Preparation/Materials: To begin the lesson, you can use any of the following: You may want to use the worksheet included in the lesson to have students discuss the topic. You may want to use a copy of the handout included in the lesson to review the topic and have students discuss the topic. Student handouts or copies of the handouts included in the lesson can be printed and used to distribute as appropriate. You may want to use the PowerPoint slides included in the lesson to present and teach the topic. You may want to use a copy of the slides included in the lesson to present to the class or a copy to use to demonstrate the lesson. Because it is assumed that students will be using the Internet, you may want to provide a copy of the school's Internet safety policy to students. Teaching Tips: Discussion: You can use the discussion questions included in the worksheet to have students discuss the topic. If the assignment is to describe the concept of academic integrity and discuss ways in which it can be violated, it is possible to discuss the topic at the beginning of the lesson and have students read the worksheet. After reading the worksheet, you can discuss the concept and have students identify ways in which academic integrity can be violated. Another way to encourage students to discuss the topic is to provide an example of an ethical dilemma. For example, if the school's policy prohibits cell phones in the classroom, provide an example of a situation in which a student might break this rule. After students have discussed the concept and the potential consequences of violating academic integrity, you can have students identify the possible consequences of violating ethical principles of Internet use. This exercise is an opportunity to begin a discussion of the consequences of the use of the Internet. For 77a5ca646e

Ratings Ads by Google AdwareOne is an annoying toolbar, ad-supporting software that is installed by various programs without users' consent, or that changes its own settings without notifying the user. It automatically promotes certain products and services. There are few things that don't like ads on the Internet: annoying pop-ups, spam, viruses, and unauthorized changes to browser and search engine settings. AdwareOne is one of those annoying toolbars that push an unwanted software to the Internet Explorer. It shows advertisements, it opens URLs without asking you and takes the control of your browser settings, and it tries to get rid of free pop-ups and spam messages. AdwareOne uses the latest methods of advertising, for example, it uses iframes, redirects, and the browser history manipulation, so it is not noticed by the user. It connects to the servers and exchanges data with them, which allows it to show the ads and to collect information
