Athletics Description:Q: How do I set up a memory leak check for one branch of the project with xcode 5? I have two separate branches of the project in Xcode 5. One is for private development, and the other is for the release of the software. I have a file that I add to the project that records how much memory each branch is using. How do I make the compiler report a leak if the leaky file has been modified on one branch but not the other? A: You can try to use the custom build script feature. The script can be for example: `#!/bin/bash echo $1 rm -rf "$1" ./myTest.sh "$1" echo "$1: memory leak detected"` Q: Is there a way to get the current contract address from my contract? I have a standard ERC20 token contract like this: `contract MyToken { function __construct() public { balanceOf[msg`
