This enables creation of models without the need to use a computer, which was historically the norm. AutoCAD can export to some file formats not natively supported, including those supported by the Portable Document Format (PDF), a common electronic file format that is used to store documents on the Internet, and other graphic and publishing file formats including: PCL (by Star/Kitware) DWG (by Quasar/CloudMagic) PLY (by Autodesk/Quasar) X3D (by Autodesk/Quasar) STL (by Autodesk/Quasar) PLY (by Autodesk/Quasar) STL (by Autodesk/Quasar) STOFF (by Autodesk/Quasar) HPGL (by Autodesk/Quasar) AI (by Autodesk/Quasar) IGES (by Autodesk/Quasar) STEP (by Autodesk/Quasar) VRML (by Autodesk/Quasar) 5b5f913d15

I'm looking for a single word to describe the act of making someone feel guilty for doing something. For example, The boss made the employees feel guilty for not attending the meeting on time. The boss made the employees feel guilty for not telling him that his plan was wrong. Does such a single word exist in English? I have not used Google and checked all relevant websites and dictionaries, so if you can give a reference to a dictionary or the relevant page in Wikipedia, I would be very grateful. A: The boss made the employees feel guilty about the meeting on time. The boss made the employees feel guilty about not telling him that his plan was wrong. These two sentences are both acceptable. The difference is that (1) is using the present tense, while (2) is in the past tense.
